The Rebels were severely handled, without being able to effect any injury on us, and as they rowed away with all possible speed many groans were heard issuing from their boats. Col. Figure in The Signal Building.

On Thesday evening, about 8 o'clock, an slaim of fire, the first for many months, occurred at this post. It was caused by a fire in the Signal Building. Some sparks fell through a hole in a defective chimney, and set fire to the floor of an upper room, over the Custom House. Near by was fortunately a pile of 20 rockets. It inding six two-feet ones, and before the flames had a read much they caught fire, causing a series of explesions, and giving the plants of the floor of the fire the building could have been saved, as no one occupied the room. The explosing rockets set fire to the contents of the room, some of them shot out of the windows, and considerable excitement was caused. The three engines were promptly on hand, to the credit of the firemen, but the fire was extinguished with buckets of water. The damage to the building was small, but a considerable quantity of ciothing, just drawn for the signal corps, and some other articles, were destroyed.

Sin: The Florida has succeeded in getting to sea. I shall follow at once, though hopeless of catching her out of port. Nelson said the want of frigates in his squadron would be found impressed on his heart. I am sure the want of steam will be found engraven on miner Had the St. Louis been a steamer. I would have anchored alongside of her, and, unrestricted by the twenty-four hour rule, my old foe could not have excaped me. The Governor, true to his declared intention, would only allow her to take on board twenty tuns of coal—sufficient to take her to the nearest port. Her commander her mainmast, then she had none, and she has yards on her billet-head for a shield surrounded by scroli-work, in which is borne the arms of the Robel States. My men have been wild to fight, and I drew the shot from my guns the day she came in, fearing that, in their excitement, they would fire into her without orders, and hreak the neutrality of this port. One thing is certain, the Florida does not intend to fight unless the chances are largely in her favor, for she skulked away from the old St. Louis.

THE COMMAND OF THE IRON-CLAD PURITAN.

The Secretary of the Navy has given the command of the great iron-clad Puritan, now in course of completion at Greenpoint, and sister ship to the Dictator, to Commodore Radiord. This is the most exalted command at the disposal of the Navy Department. The Puritan has twice the offensive power of the Dictator, and will have four enormous guns instead of two. Commodore Radiord has been the Commander of the Brooklyn Navy-Yard for some years. He entered the service on a Missouri appointment, on the 1st of April, 1825, and has consequently been in the Navy hearly 40 years. He was 13 years at sea, having last been Captain of the steam-sloop Dacotah, and was a schoolmate of Admirsl Dahlgren. Commodores Rowan and Rogers, Captains Meade, Drayton, and others.

This vessel is rapidly preparing for her trip to Europe. The inner shell of her turret is being taken to its place on board the vessel. It is slid along on greased ways by means of an immense pulley-block, the rope being wound on a windlass by horse-power. The turret rests stationary on its ways till the rope is stretched to a certain tension, when it slips forward a foot or more at a step. This interior shell is formed of four plates, each one inch thick. When it is in place on the vessel, it is to be surrounded from top to bottom by hoops, each 5 inches thick and 11 inches wide; these hoops being formed in quarter sections, so that four pieces reach round the turret. These hoops are not pierced by bolt holes, but are held in place by the outer shell of the turret, which is 6 inches thick, built up of plates, each screne-eighths of an inch in thickness. This outer shell is to be put together just above the turret, and then lowered into its place with the sid of hydraulic presses.
